

Rachael Price, 23, jazz singer

The IMPROPER BOSTONIAN

BORN IN SYDNEY, Australia, and raised in Nashville, Tenn., this sultry songbird received her bachelor of music in Jazz Studies from the New England Conservatory. Since then, her performing career has been on a steady upward trajectory. A soulful interpreter of jazz standards, she's the frontwoman for the Rachael Price Quartet and Lake Street Dive, and she was a semifinalist in the Thelonious Monk International Jazz Competition, as well as a finalist in the Montreux Jazz Festival Voice Competition. Although she enjoys mornings, her profession means that she rarely sees them. Belying her career are her homey hobbies of cooking and baking. A badminton enthusiast ("naturally"), her other interests include midwifery and her two cats, Hank and Stella. She loves all sorts of music ("when done well"), dancing ("mostly in my kitchen"), Bollywood spectaculars and any musical starring Judy Garland or Doris Day. Sardonic, witty and unbelievably talented, she's a golden-throated songbird bound for stardom, and any guy interested in her had better be willing to go along for the ride.
